Aunt Beak's Antiques: and other stories Mr. Joel A. Clark

Will the lackluster Henry ever impress the vivacious and frolicsome Ginny? (How about writing a Broadway musical?) What bait might you use to trap the elusive Bigfoot? Will the oh-so-adorable Dee Dee want to know about frequency modulation standards recommended by the FCC? Is there hidden GOLD in a certain wandering steam calliope? Can a has-been ventriloquist boxer help the Mounties nab rustlers? Do writers ever get a tiny bit jealous and if they do, do they hide it so well that nobody ever notices? How many diamond engagement rings does the engaging Ms. Velvet really need? Does Aunt Beak's Antiques really have shopping carts? Will Castro's Getaway Boat be used for a getaway after all? There are suspicions that it was easy for Mr. Clark to write these stories because he is merely relating events in his own listless and irrational life. But contradictory evidence says: 1. He is not old enough to have failed so many times (pretty old, though). 2. He is not in jail and does not appear on any wanted posters. and 3. All those violations of laws of physics. We also must ask the question: Could this person, widely known as a bumbling nebbish, really build a six-legged ant-car with a shiny black body? (We CAN believe Lucy didn't want to ride in it.) Did he really ride inside a vehicle called a "Tree-top Torpedo"? Mr. Clark commented, "I am only LOCALLY known as a bumbling nebbish!" Other questions answered in this book in friendly, easy-to-read language (no big words) are: Will the ballet "Flowers of Summer" be a hit at DELETED State Prison? What is the science teacher hiding in his secret workshop at Hannibal High School? (He's showing it to General Bufinox!) Will the citizens of Mushville buy more Daily Klaxons now that Dusty is getting some incredible scoops? What do cats really want? If Fluffy spills her guts, will a fur ball be far behind? Will the well-armed new deputy of Light Bulb, Arkansas catch the serial bicycle thief? Can Alvin get those wimpy wind-up toads (TTHF Toad)* to jump higher? Are giant bird's nests legal in the town of Uppity Falls? Some advice to Iggy, (if, by any chance, you are reading this): Keep drawing those cute bumble bees. Lucy loves them, so does Wanda. Or do they? Is Mr. Clark relating his own experience in the story "Library Days"? There is a suspicion that Mr. Clark now likes guacamole only because he sampled a picnic basket which came into his possession by certain nefarious means. "Ha, ha, ha, another unfounded rumor," said Mr. Clark. *Tippity Toppity Hoppity Floppity Toad
