Make It Interesting

Stand out and be remembered.

"My interest is in the future because I am going to spend the rest of my life there." —Charles Kettering, inventor

The Problem

Companies can't differentiate themselves from competitors, so they don't leave a lasting impression with customers.

The Solution

Connect with customers in a memorable way your competitors haven't yet been able to.

- Fit in. Make your products and services emotionally interesting.<sup>174</sup> Use mood-driven advertising, give passionate talks, and engage people through social networks. Customers want relationships with brands that match their beliefs, but through their preferred channels.
- Be easy to remember. Focus your efforts in one area and show how you are better than a competitor. Don't do too many things, as this will add confusion and make customers remember you for the wrong reasons. Do less to do more.<sup>175</sup>
- Delight and surprise.<sup>176</sup> Reveal new and useful features regularly. Track customer issues and feedback to decide what to improve, and really wow them. Aim to remain fresh and attractive to new and existing customers.
